Power of Play

Unveiling the Hidden Learning Gem

Developing Social Skills: Learning centers such as dramatic play and blocks offer are disregarded by parents as learning venues and seen as chaotic areas in a preschool classroom. These areas are full of educational cognitive skill development gems such as cause and effect and creating environments! But in addition, these are wonderful places for children to practice the social skills needed to navigate relationships. Negotiating roles in make-believe scenarios, they learn to understand others' perspectives and communicate their own thoughts and feelings effectively.

Solo Challenge: Flowers Are Blooming

Adventures will divide into four groups. Each group will have two small cars, two disk magnets, and a roll of tape. They will begin by building a mock roller coaster on the floor using classroom materials. They will tape the positive side of one magnet to the front of the car and the negative side to the back of the second car. They will put the coaster car "train" through their roller coaster.

Adventures will experiment with magnetism by changing the configuration of the magnets. Keeping the negative side away from the cars will repel them. What will happen if they put both positive sides away from the car?

They will experiment and discuss their observations.
